Syria masses more troops Shelling rocks Beirut: UN backs League

BEIRUT, April 25, (Agencies): Syria massed more troops and armour at front lines with besieged Christian forces in north Lebanou, as the UN Security Council declared its support to the Arab League's effort to secure a truce and political settlement, sources said.

They said an unknown number of reinforcements, backed by 200 tanks, other armoured vehicles and two gun-batteries, deployed recently at the edge of the Koura district facing Christians controlling the Byblos area. The report could not be confirmed further.

Investment guaranty agreement signed

Insurance coverage

KUWAIT signed an investment guaranty agreement with the United States on Monday, paving the way for enhanced foreign participation in Kuwaiti

The agreement, signed by Kuwait's Finance Minister Jassem Al Khorafi and US Ambassador W. Nathaniel Howell, "allows the US Overseas Private Investments Corporation: (OPIC) to issue insurance coverage for American businesses engaged in economic activity in Kuwait or with Kuwait," an official at the US embassy said.

OPIC is a US government agency that acts as an insurance agent for a number of American firms which conduct business overseas. Its primary function is to insure foreign investments. though it also covers a number of other types of business ventures. "The goal is to make it more" convenient for foreign, par-ticularly American businessmen to do business in Kuwait," the

The OPIC offers relatively inexpensive insurance for such things as war and revolution. whereas private insurance companies don't offer that type of coverage or charge outlandish prices for it. "Kuwait is very interested in having US firms get involved here, particularly in the area of contracting," the embassy spokesman said.

He explained that Kuwait will

Recruit scandal casualty

TOKYO, April 25, (Agencies): Japan's Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, losing popularity fast amid an influence-peddling scandal, said today he will resign but left the timing of his departure and the identity of his successor unclear.

Takeshita listens to questions being asked by opposition party members on his involvement in the Recruit

"I offer my deep apology to the people of our country, particularly for allowing political distrust to deepen due to affairs in which I was involved," Takeshita said at a news conference at "I have chosen to step aside in order to restore the people's trust in government," Takeshita said.

Takeshita said he and his cabinet will resign after approval of the 1989 budget by the Diet, Japan's Parliament, which is expected in May.

The Recruit scandal, which has bedeviled Japanese politics for half of Takeshita's 18-month tenure, leaves his country in a state of political uncertainty. It appeared possible that an elder politician from Takeshita's Liberal Democratic Party may become a sort of interim prime minister until the situation is sorted out.

The candidate mentioned in many news reports today was former Foreign Minister Masayoshi Ito, a diabetic whose bealth was in question. But Ito, the 75-year-old chairman of the ruling Liberal Democratic Party's executive council, appeared to decline. "I think it should be a young person. It's time for a young per-son to be in charge," he said. The Recruit scandal erupted last summer with revelations that the company had sold cut-price shares in a real estate subsidiary to more than 150 politicians, bureaucrats, business leaders and media executives. The shares, often bought with money lent by another Recruit subsidiary, yielded fat profits when sold after the subsidiary went public in 1986.

Toxic drugs can be eliminated

Treatment for organ transplants

STANFORD, California, April 25, (AP): A promising treatment for organ transplant patients could eliminate the lifelong need for highly toxic drugs to fight rejection of new organs by the body's immune system, researchers say.

The treatment, though in an experimental stage in rats and perhaps five years from being used in humans, could revolutionise organ transplants by overcoming one of the operations major risks and improving the quality of the patient's lives, said Dr C. Garrison Fathman, a Stanford University professor of

The approach uses three doses of tailor-made monoclonal antibodies before transplant sur-gery to temporarily "blind" the immune system and keep it from recognising a new organ as foreign tissue and attacking it.

Rats given the treatment before receiving transplanted hearts have now survived for more than 200 days without signs of rejection and without any additional anti-rejection

Dr Thomas Flavin, of the Stanford Department of Cardiovascular Surgery, was to present the findings later at the International Society for Heart Transplantation meeting in Munich, West Germany. The treatment effectively paralysed the rat immune system by killing certain cells before surgeons implanted hearts from donor rats into the abdomens of other rats, leaving the dards in the airline industry are not being properly applied in many parts of the world. IATA "sees the current situa-tion as still being critical and con-tinued improvement in security

He declined to name the countries, saying "that would be a give-away to terrorists."

At its executive committee meeting last Friday, IATA set up for the first time a top level advisory group to co-ordinate industry security policy, Kyd said.

Rape case stirs anger

'She wasn't nothing'

NEW YORK, April 25, (Reuter): New York City is in uproar over a case of "wilding," slum slang for a teen-age rampage through Central Park that ended with the rape and neardeath of a woman jogger in what her assailants called fun.

Eight youths, aged between 14 and 17, are being held without bail as the woman, 28, a Wall Street investment adviser, lies in a coma fighting for life. Her parents sit at her bedside, asking strangers for prayers.

Since the assault last Wednesday night, New Yorkers seem to have thought and talked of noth-

"Go wilding," words inspired by a song the youths used to describe their attack, has entered the language with a vengeance.

There are fears the attack could ignite racial tensions. The woman's accused attackers were black and Hispanic. She is white. But her attackers insist in statements released by prosecutors that race was not a They say they just wanted to add a woman to a list of nine joggers and pedestrians they attacked in 75 minutes in a park that is both a source of pride and fear for New Yorkers.

"She wasn't nothing," said one of her accused attackers, Antron McCray, 15, while being held in custody.

"He said he did it because 'it was fun,' " said assistant prosecutor Elizabeth Lederer of a comment made by another accused assailant, Yusef Salaam,

Officials say they are shocked that not a single one of the arrested youths has expressed any real remorse. They added that they are even shocked at their parents'

The woman was jogging in the northern Harlem end of the park at 10 pm. Friends said she jogged every night, although many New Yorkers refuse to go into the park late at night.

A gang of about 12 youths assaulted her, ignoring her screams of "let me alone," to smash her head with a lead pipe and a brick and then rip her clothes off and rape her. Police said they think about five of the youths took turns raping her while other held her down. They then left her to die.

Only one youth questioned what he did. "He said it got to him when he saw her blood squirt," a police source said.

Stop executions, urges Amnesty

Rough justice for condemned prisoners

LONDON, April 25, (Agencies): Amnesty International called on 100 countries to abolish the death penalty, which it said violated human rights and discriminates against minorities and the poor

"An execution cannot be used to condemn killing it is killing," the international human rights organisation said in a 268-page report, "When the State Kills ... the Death Penalty v. Human Rights," released

Amnesty said in the past 10 years it has recorded 15,320 executions in 90 of the 100 countries that still have the death penalty.

The organisation said its records were "merely the tip of the iceberg," citing estimates of more than 40,000 men, women and children executed

Amnesty rejected arguments than capital punishment is a determent to criminals or a just retribution for murder, citing reports by British and US com-missions and studies done in Canada, Nigeria and elsewhere.
The death penalty is legal in all 18 Middle East countries, but

Amnesty International reported it was not aware of any executions last year in Egypt, Libya, Morocco, Oman or Tunisia. There have been no executions in Bahrain since 1977 and none in Israel or the occupied territories since 1961, the human rights group said in a report on capital Elsewhere in the region, executions have taken place for a range of crimes including murder, abduction, rape, adultery, violent robbery and drug-traf-ficking, as well as politically related offences and religious crimes, Amnesty International The report said there have been public executions in seven countries in the region in the past year and in Libya before 1988, it Amnesty said thousands have been executed in Iran since 1979. Two of the biggest waves of mass political executions were in the early 1980s and the second half of decade. They were broadcast on national television in Yemen this

1988, it said. "Countless prisoners were killed in both waves, many of them for their non-violent political opposition," Amnesty

Trials before Iranian Islamic revolutionary courts have sometimes consisted of nothing more than a reading out of the charge and the passing of sen-tence, Amnesty said, adding it had never heard of defence lawyers being permitted in such courts for political cases.

Morethan 300 drug traffickers and other criminals have been executed so far this year in Iran, often after unfair trials, Amnesty

Amnesty International said two leaders in the Middle East have taken "significant steps" toward abolition of the death penalty. It said Tunisia's President Zine Al Abidine Ben Ali has commuted all death sentences since coming to power in 1987 and told Amnesty, he is personally opposed to the death penalty. In March 1988 Libya's Col. Moammar Khaddafi called for the abolition of the death penalty and has also commuted death sentences. US

The death penalty in the United States appears arbitrary and racially biased in some cases and has been imposed on juveniles, the mentally ill and people whose guilt was strongly in doubt, Amnesty International Annesty said 25 US states, along with Barbados, are the only jurisdictions in the Ameicas that provide for the death penalty on persons aged under 18 at the time of the crime.

As of May 1, 1988, 2,048 prisoners were under sentence of death in 35 US states, three of them tried under military law, and from 1977 to May 31, 1988 98 offenders were executed, among them two juveniles in Texas and one in South Carolina,

It said that blacks, who are 12 per cent of the population, comprise 41 per cent of prisoners under sentence of death.

Amnesty said that China had executed up to 30,000 people in a drive against crime in recent years, raising fears that some defendants may not receive a fair

US newspapers still slow on minority hiring

CHICAGO, April 25, (Reuter): American newspapers have failed to find a way to make their work forces racially diverse, the publisher of the New York Times said yesterday.

Arthur Sulzberger, chairman of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, told the group's annual meeting that a survey showed the industry has "no cause for self congratulations" on the issue.

"Of what might seem to be a passable 16 per cent minority representation in the workforce, only seven per cent turn out to be managers or executives," he said.

"And I would hazard a guess that if you removed staff positions from that number and concentrated on line jobs (with direct authority), the percentage would drop appreciably," he said. Despite increased attention paid to the issue in recent years, he said, "the solution remains elusive." "We have a long way to go but we've started. The ANPA has set up a minority job hotline, where applicants can learn of current job opportunities," he said. "It has expanded its multicultural management workshops and now actively participates in job fairs and minority training."

"Everywhere experience shows that executions brutalise those involved in the process," the report said. "Nowhere has it been shown that the death penalty has any special power to reduce crime or political violence. In country after country, it is used disproportionately against the poor or against racial or ethnic minorities." The report detailed the situation in 180 countries from 1985 to mid-

1988. It said 25 of the 63 countries that executed people in those years did so only for murder, while other countries executed people convicted of adultery, prostitution, pornography, taking bribes, being at enmity with God, drug-trafficking, economic corruption and other crimes. The report singled out several countries where the bulk of executions have taken place, including Iran, China, South Africa, and Nigeria.

Drugs not a major problem: Awadi

Special committee to combat spread

KUWAIT'S Minister of Planning Dr Abdul Rahman Al Awadi was quoted as saying that addiction to narcotics is not on the increase and does not constitute a major problem in

In an interview with a local daily, Awadi said that narcotics is the blight of the world at present and warned against the spread of the epidemic.

He confirmed that the formation of a higher committee by Kuwait's Higher Planning Council for eradicating the narcotic menace embodied Kuwait's awareness and represented Kuwait's readiness to combat the spread of this abominable

He added that "the government was planning to institute an apparatus for combatting the problem by concentrating efforts to achieve the necessary protection for our home country from a blight that is currently threatening the world entirely."

The formation of a higher committee for combatting drugs by the Higher Planning Council is aimed at determining the central point of view to achieve this objective.
The committee will be affiliated to the Ministry of the Interior and will group representatives from the ministries concerned. A report about the terms of reference of this committee will be submitted to the Cabinet

Meanwhile, Dr Awadi said it was unnecessary to keep the committee as an independent body as several authorities are involved in fighting this menace.

He called for co-operation between authorities and families to keep youth away from narcotics. No progress in this connection will be achieved in the absence of such co-operation, Awadi said.

He disclosed that the govern-ment is studying the possibility of establishing a new centre for treating the addicts.

Preparations on for next Five Year Plan

Decree to be issued by July 1990

By Jamal Amin

DR ABDUL HADI Ai Awadi, Undersecretary of Ministry of Planning and the General Coordinator of the Five Year Plan has said that seven planning committees were set up to supervise preparing and carrying out plans in the different sectors and to co-ordinate activities of each sector. These committees comprise heads of planning committee of the ministries, and establishments, national cadres and specialists at public and private sectors.

Dr Yacoub Al Sharrah heads the population and manpower resources development committee, Dr Farouk Al Omar heads the social and cultural development committee, Dr Yousef Al Awadi heads the economic development committee, Major General Mohammed Al Bader heads the security committee, Hamed Shueb heads the utilities and projects committee, Saud Al Mihaisen heads the administrative development committee and Dr Kazem Behbehani heads the information and strategic research committee, Awadi said.

Government authorities are going to send data and information relating to aims, policies and programmes including construction projects and programmes of evaluation of performance at the public sector to the Planning Ministry, the official said.

The present and next stage of the plan requires serious efforts from all public staff in order to make the required information available as soon as possible which will enable the Planning Ministry to study the contents and refer them to the relevant planning committee.

The ministry will organise ten seminars as of mid-May till mid-June to discuss different social and economic questions. The seminars aim at recommending specific policies to solve economic and social problems. The seminary will give special con-cern to participation of private sector in the development plan. The Planning Ministry will contact the relevant authorities to establish the planning awareness of the public. This can be achieved by the co-ordination and co-operation among some ministries that have direct relation with citizens such as Education Ministry, Information Ministry and newspapers.

The plan is intended to establish a Kuwaiti homogeneous Arabic and Islamic society in which Kuwaiti nationals are the essential power in development work. This will be achieved through Kuwaitisation and Arabisation of jobs, Awadi said. Meetings

Dr Awadi stressed on the importance of receiving the required information and data according to a preset timetable in order to refer them to the relevant committees. He added that Ministry of Planning set up work teams to co-operate with the planning committees at the ministries and other government bodies. These teams are:

 Population and manpower development team —Commodities production sectors team

 Social services sectors team - Commerce and Finance sectors team

-Basic structure sectors team Central services and external relations sectors team.

The team will co-operate with the relevant committees in studying and analysing performance and problems that face these sectors. They will also submit proposals and aims they seek to achieve and the required policies and programmes, he said.

Commenting on the achievements of the ministry during the past period of preparing the Five Year Plan, Dr Awadi said that the ministry has had big achievements in this respect. It built a base for economic information that will be used to evaluate and analyse planning

It will also benefit from a study prepared by the Finance Ministry about the economic development in Kuwait which was made in co-operation with Public Investment Authority and KISR.

Several meetings will be held during the coming period for dif-ferent committees in order to determine policies and program-mes of each sector beside deter-mining the required budgets. The development strategy of Kuwait focuses on the building of the Kuwaiti human being which is the basic aim.

The ministry will co-operate with other ministries and public authorities in order to raise reports on these works to the ministerial committee that is headed by the Deputy Prime Minister and Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah Al Ahmed. The ministerial committee supervises preparation and execution of the Five Year Plan. The committee raises its recommendations and comments on the plan to the Council of Ministers that refers it to the Higher Planning Council.

Bush said he has not had any conversations, direct or indirect, about whether he would pardon North, who is awaiting a verdict from jurors on charges stemming from the diversion of Iran arms sales profits to the Nicaraguan

The President made the comments in a question-and-answer session with five reporters accompanying him on a flight from Virginia to Chicago.

In the past, Bush has called North a hero and said he hoped North would be acquitted. He was asked about a report in

Newsweek magazine quoting sources close to him as predicting he would never pardon North, one-time aide on the National Security Council in Ronald Reagan's White House.

"That's interesting speculation," Bush said. "It shows how stupid some reports are because that matter has never been discussed with me by anybody, including my wife.

"It shows you how idiotic speculation is. If it was given any credence as having come from me or as if somebody had discussed it with me, they simply haven't," he said.

One of the jurors deliberating Iran-Contra charges against North has high blood pressure and will be examined by a doctor, the trial judge said.

US district judge Gerhard Gesell identified the juror as Jean Johnson and said she has experienced high blood pressure during jury deliberations, which began on Friday. Johnson is a 53year-old cashier whose husband

"I would like to arrange" for a doctor to "take a look at ber", Gesell said in court. She will be examined in the presence of a deputy US marshal.

Meanwhile, Gesell said the NBC television network left unsigned letters at the homes of jurors in the North case, inviting them to do interviews after the trial is over. He said the letters had been picked up by deputies from the US marshals service.

Peggy Hubble, NBC network news spokesman in New York, said, "the jurors are sequestered, so they're not at their homes ... it was intended for them to see them when they got home after they made their decision after the trial, and the letter specifically requested an interview after the

The jury resumed deliberations yesterday morning after a one-day leisure break. The nine women and three men were brought from their downtown hotel in a van for their third day of meetings shortly before 9 am (1300 GMT).

The marshals taped television shows for them over the weekend and cut out anything that might refer to the North trial or the Iran-Contra affair. And the guards remained nearby while jurors spend Sunday with their families.

Earlier yesterday, an alternate juror, dismissed on Thursday when the case went to the jury, said in a national television interview that she "just felt for" North, a former White House

Bush vows to seek release of hostages

US reviewing arms control policy cies): President Bush promised yesterday the United States would do whatever it could to held hostage in Lebanon. The President, on the second stop of a four-day swing across the US departed from his prepared speech at the American Newspaper Publishers Association convention to bring up the plight of the hostages held by Muslim radicals.

He specifically mentioned Associated Press Middle East bureau chief Terry Anderson, who has been held four years, longest of the captives.

"I just want to say without being able to give you any good news that we are concerned, we will follow every intelligence lead, we will go the extra mile to do what we can," Bush said.

The US turned to a policy of giving no concessions after the Reagan administration was embarrassed in November 1986 by revelations it had sold weapons to Iran in exchange for the release of some hostages.

Officials say different factions hold the nine American hostages, all of whom were seized in Lebanon, but they are elements of the umbrella group, Hez-bollah, over which Iran exhibits control. The US has called for the unconditional release of all hostages before it will talk with Iran. Bush seems eager to look the "long road ahead" as he rounds out 100 days in office, pledging to use the next several weeks to complete a detailed foreign policy review, draft environmental legislation and intensify his war on drugs. Bush summarized his first 100 days in office - which end on Saturday —by saying he is "off to a good start ... and there's more to come."

Bush identified several key issues as being "on the near They include completion of a

Modernising short-range missiles

LONDON, April 25, (AP): NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner yesterday said that the alliance must update its arsenal and suggested that West German resistance to modernising short-range missiles might be overcome by compromise.

Meanwhile, a British official said US President George Bush telephoned Prime Minister Margutet Thatcher on Saturday for a 20-minute discussion. They discussed the different positions being taken on modernisation by members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, he said.

Bush telephoned one day after the West German government urged early negotiations between the superpowers on eliminating

In a swift follow-up, West Ger-man Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher and Defence Minister Gerhard Stoltenberg flew to Washington yesterday for talks with US officials.

A spokesman at Thatcher's office gave no details of her conversation with Bush, but said the two leaders "concentrated on the short-range missile issue." He .

said Bush initiated the call. Woerner, addressing luncheon given by the Association of American Correspondents in London, said NATO's "nuclear and conventional weapons have to be kept up to date."

But he said possible compromises between West German resistance and US and British pressure to modernise included unilateral cuts by NATO in nuclear artillery shells - after modernising the short-range missiles.

Threat to halt trade

Bonn helps Iraq make missiles, says Iran

NICOSIA, April 25, (AP): Iran threatened yesterday to cut its trade links with West Germany, accusing it of supplying Iraq with the technology to build long-range misssiles and chemical weapons, the official Islamic Republic News Agency (IRNA) reported.

The agency, monitored in Nicosia, said the Iranian Foreign Ministry summoned West German Charge d'Affaires Thomas Troemel to deliver a strongly worded protest.

IRNA reported that the ministry warned the West Germans that "it may lower trade relations ... because the Bonn government has been helping ... Iraq man-ufacture missiles and internationally banned chemical weapons.

Troemel replied that West Germany "means to maintain amicable relations with the Islamic Republic of Iran," the agency said.

Iraq used missiles effectively during the eight year Gulf war against Iran. Deniai -

In Bonn, Foreign Ministry the West Germans had not yet been informed by Troemel and declined comment.

Iraq recently disclosed it has developed new missiles with a range of 650 miles (1,000 kilometres) and said the missiles would be displayed at a defence exhibition scheduled to open in Baghdad, on April 28. Maj. Gen. Amer Al Saadi, chief of Iraq's military industries organisation, said the five-day exhibition will also feature Soviet-designed tanks, tank cannons and field artillery built under licence in Iraq.

But he told reporters "you will see more sophisticated, more advanced missiles with a longer range and better capabilities than we used against Iran."

Saadi, acknowledged that the missile was being developed in co-operation with Egypt, but denied as a "figment of the imagination" that Argentina was also involved.

The BBC reported earlier this month that West Germany's largest aerospace group, Messers-chmidt-Boelkow-Blohm, provi-de technical aid and expertise for the project.

1,500 detained in Egyptian crackdown on extremists

CAIRO, April 25, (Reuter): Egyptian authorities have arrested some 1,500 alleged Muslim militants in a two-week nation-wide crackdown on extremist agitations, security sources said yesterday.

'The hunt for more extremists will continue. The aim of these arrests is to abort any attempt now or in the future to foment trouble in the country," one source said.

Interior Minister Zaki Badr said he had ordered a probe by security authorities to determine whether there was foreign involvement in a recent wave of anti-government activity. Badr, whose remarks were carried by the Middle East News Agency, did not elaborate. He has in the past, however, accused Libya and Iran of fomenting trouble in Egypt. He told guests at a banquet at Cairo's Police Academy on Sunday night: "These extremist groups are fuelling religious strife in the country and they must be met with force. We will meet violence with violence." The latest arrests followed a clash on April 7 between Muslim zealots and police in the oasis town of Fayoum southwest of Cairo, the security sources said. Eight people, including the town's local police chief, were wounded in the clash.

Egypt's Muslim militants have for years been campaigning for an Islamic society based on Islamic sharia laws.

They have recently used the country's economic troubles in their argument that only sharia could save Egypt from total economic collapse and social chaos.

Aoun's strength

PEOPLE who underevaluate the real power and strength of the head of the military government in Lebanon Michel Aoun, are Aoun is the real president that the Lebanese people want as he has proved that he is the king of all the Lebanese people by following no sectarian policies.

Furthermore, he is not an individual who will deal with the devil for extricating his country from its crisis.

Till now, Aoun has proved that he is capable of resisting his opponents. Continuing to be in power during this crucial period is indeed ample evidence of this fact. For this to have been achieved, he must have had the staunch support of the Lebanese people — whether this be overt or covert.

The majority of the Lebanese people who support Aoun are bearing most of the destruction during the current war raging in Beirut. It is said that there are some in the opposition that are providing covert support.

As an analogy, the United States suffered from this very dilemma in Vietnam — they never knew who of the Vietnamese supported them and who did not. The majority of the Vietnamese wanted the Americans to withdraw.

In the case of the Lebanese, all want their country independent. They may be "masking" some of their wishes and sympathies, but it all goes in Aoun's support. Aoun desires that be Lebanon free and independent and the Lebanese can by themselves achieve harmony among their various sects.

Suffice it to say that Aoun has never shown any favour to his own sect, he has never dealt with Israel, he is not a racist — he is a true Lebanese. All he wants is that Lebanon be free. This is perhaps the secret of his strength that his opponents must see

Like the Americans learnt in Vietnam, others will learn that it is a foolish policy to fight those without ascertaining who is in favour and who is against.

Kohl under threat

Local elections setback

By Richard Williams

BONN, (Reuter): Three months ago Franz Schoenhuber's Republican Party was a small right-wing group clinging to the fringe of West German political life.

But after a remarkable breakthrough in local elections, the Republicans are poised to leap into national politics and their success could cost Chancellor Helmut Kohl's centre-right coalition its majority in the next federal poll.

The Republicans took 7.5 per cent of the vote in elections to West Berlin's state parliament on Jan 29 after a campaign marked by antiforeigner sentiment and nationalism, taking thousands of disillusioned voters from Kohl's Christian Democrats (CDU).

It was the best result posted by a far-right party in West Germany in 20 years.

Six weeks later the Republicans and other right-wing groups performed well in municipal elections in Hesse state. If the opinion polls are to be believed, the Republicans will take around seven per cent of the vote in elections for the European parliament in June. "Until the returns started to come in on the night of the West Berlin election we were regarded by respected newspapers as conservative nationalists, right-wing conservatives," Schoenhuber, a 66-year-old former SS soldier, told journalists this month at the launch of the Republicans' campaign for the European elections. Now we've won 11 seats in the West Berlin parliament we've suddenly become right-wing radicals, extremists and a danger to the Schoenhuber, a former Bavarian television journalist who lost his job after writing a book glorifying the armed divisions of the SS, argues that many of his followers are fed up with having to feel guilty about being German because of the Nazi past.

"Ijoined the Waffen SS of my own free will at 18-1/2 years of age. Do you want to hear from a man of 66 that he was damned for life at 18?

"We could not know at 18 that the Nazi state was an unlawful state whose racist and anti-semitic tendencies led to the greatest catastrophe in German history." Schoenhuber says his party stands for a "democratically purified patriotism" freed from the shadow of the Third Reich.

Political analysts say that public concern about a large influx of foreigners seeking political asylum in West Germany, placing further strains on an already stretched housing and job market, has been the major reason for the Republicans' success.

Some 103,000 foreigners, mostly from Eastern Europe and the developing world, applied for asylum in 1988.

Only about nine per cent were granted asylum as genuine victims of political persecution but deportations are rare among those whose applications fail.
"A large number, especially in Bavaria, of those in centres for asylum seekers are drug dealers or people who frequently get into trouble with the law," according to Schoenhuber, who wants tough controls to stem

Plodding along just fine

WASHINGTON, (Reuter): George Bush, nearing the 100-day mark of his presidency, seems to be tailoring his administration according to the folk saying "if it ain't broke, don't fix it."

"We're not looking for wrenching change," said one White House aide privately. "The American people elected George Bush because they liked the direction America was

White House officials say that with unemployment at a 15-year low and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev seemingly intent on reducing international tension to concentrate on reform at home there is no reason for Bush to rock the boat.

"Most administrations have had to wrestle with threats to peace or the economy or both," said White House communications director David Demarest. "Right now, we're less in a period of threat than of opportunity on the international side. And the economy is nearing seven straight years of growth." Compared with other recent US presidents, who have swept into office with a barrage of initiatives designed to let the world know they have arrived, Bush has entered plodding in the footsteps of Ronald Reagan, who retired last January after eight years at the helm.

Lydon Johnson declared a 'war on poverty' and John Kennedy boldly announced that the torch has been passed to a new genera-tion. Bush has spoken of limited resources and the need to allocate them differently.

"Our funds are low," Bush said in his inaugural address. "We will make the hard choices ... based on honest need and prudent safety.

Bush says the 100-day standard, inspired by the first three months of Franklin Roosevelt's presidency when Congress approved major new programmes almost daily in response to the great depression, is inappropriate because he took office after eight years of peace and prosperity. He was also vice-president to one of the most popular US leaders in history.

"We didn't come in here throwing the rascals out to try to do something — correct all the ills of the world in 100 days," the 64-year-old Bush told reporters as he reflected on his first three months in office.

White House officials say the relative calm has given Bush a unique chance to step back for a long-term look.

"What you're seeing is the willingness to take the time to make sure what is done is the right thing to do to solve the problem, rather than something that looks good in the short term," said White House chief of staff John

Bush's critics say his style shows uncertainty. To some, his insistence on lengthy policy reviews before laying out his views on foreign matters suggests a lack of imagination that will hamper his efforts to respond to Gorbachev's shake-up of the Soviet system and reform movements in Eastern Europe. Critics also cite a lack of specific accomplishments and substance.

A New York Times/CBS news poll suggests voters are in two minds about Bush with 61 per cent approving of his performance but only 28 per cent saying he is working hard to solve the problems that concern them most. Bush and his advisers say the critics looking for the sort of razzle-dazzle that grabs headlines — have ignored a number of initiatives that promise long-term results. They cite his proposal to shore up the country's troubled savings and loan industry, an outline for easing the debt burden of Third World countries, and compromises with Congress that produced bipartisan deals on a budget and on US aid for Nicaragua's Contra

Even Bush's political foes say he deserves credit for a mood of well-being that, for now, has replaced the acrimony that marked relations between Congress and the White House for more than two decades.

"Co-operation is more important for the function of this government than sending up a lot of quick bills to Congress and announcing a lot of initiatives," said House of Represen-tatives Democratic leader Thomas Foley.

dialogue with the Palestine Liberation Organisation (PLO). Bush told reporters that Shamir's proposal for elections in the occupied territories, where a Palestinian uprising shows no sign of abating, "offers some promise" of advancing the Middle East peace process.

But outside experts said the next phase of Bush's step-by-step peacemaking approach — fleshing out the proposal - will pose a real challenge for the US administration.

"There are several differences between the United States and Israel and they are critical difsed," said Fred Axlegard, an analyst at the Centre for Strategic and International Studies, a private think-tank.

The proposal calls for elections to select Palestinians to work out arrangements with Israel for limited self-government in the occupied territories.

After an undefined transition period when the Palestinians would run their own affairs under Israeli military control, it envisions negotiations on the core issue, - a permanent solution of the Palestinian problem.

Although Shamir attached a number of strings to the plan, Mubarak and Hussein have given it qualified backing and US officials said even the PLO had not slammed the door.

PLO leader Yasser Arafat has said that he would accept internationally supervised elections on the West Bank before a complete Israeli withdrawal, but only if they were part of a package that led to complete Palestinian self-determination. The election (is) not (to be) followed by negotiations. The election is a part of exercising of our people for their self-determination," Arafat said in a televised interview.

The question now is can the Israelis be moved to accept conditions for such elections and negotiations to make the proposal a practical one?" Robert Neumann, a former American ambassador to Saudi Arabia," said in an interview.

While Neumann estimated that there was only a one-in-five chance the election plan would succeed, he applauded the administration's determination to explore it.
"It is the function of diplomacy to explore every avenue and I think the President is right to look int oit," he said.

"When asked how he would follow up on his discussions with Mubarak, Hussein and Shamir, Bush said he planned to talk to more Middle Eastern leaders.
US officials said backstage diplomacy would first clarify the Israeli plan.

"We want to know what kind of elections would be held, how they would be linked to negotiations, who would participate and how they would be supervised," one policymaker said. He said no deadline had been set but independent analysts said Bush probably had only until mid-summer before he had to decide on his next move.

They said the US effort to move the peace process along had to show some results fairly soon to stave off pressure on Arafat from the PLO's extremist wing to abandon the diplomatic track.

Prince Hassan 'crisis manager'

AMMAN, (Reuter): Jordan's Crown Prince Hassan has emerged as a crisis-manager who uses a gloved fist to quell riots and rare royal frankness to disarm potential critics.

"He's won considerable credibility," said a Jordanian analyst. "He has criticised the government's handling of the economy and many people share his sympathetic view of the spontaneous outbreaks of anger over price increases."

The stocky prince kept up a calm front throughout five days of violent unrest last week, with no hint of the brutal repression or sabrerattling rhetoric common elsewhere in the Middle East. Though he described himself as "ratty" after going short of sleep, he was still able to crack jokes with the foreign press.

He had held back the considerable might of Jordan's well-equipped armed forces when the stones began to fly. Instead, lightly-armed paramilitary police gradually restored order in southern towns and villages when youths smashed bank windows, burned cars and blocked roads. Eight people, including two security men, were killed but the casualty toll could have soared had the Army moved in with tanks and shoot-to-kill orders. But the prince took his time. Foreign journalists had no difficulty entering the country and the prince tried to win their sympathy by speaking to them at length in his clipped British accent about the

Ishihara and the heads of other major Japanese business groups greeted Takeshita's decision to resign with formal statements of hope that the budget could now be passed quickly and real progress

Report sees low oil Explosion rocks US prices through '90s Ford plant

DEARBORN, Mich., April 25, (Reuter): Two workers were presumed killed and most of the world's largest car-making complex was shut down by an explosion that ripped through a Ford Motor Co. electrical power plant early yesterday. Chest-high floods hampered rescue attempts after the 6:20 am (1020 GMT) blast tore out pavement and ruptured a major water pipe, Ford spokesman Bill Carroll said.

"It blew out all the windows, did damage to all the sheds. One woman was thrown up against a wall. It injured another woman in the parking lot, tipped over cars. Debris flew around for a couple of hundred yards," he told Reuters.

The blast shot through a network of underground tunnels carrying compressed air and steam from the suburban serving Ford Rouge, the name of the huge complex of five plants.

Chronology of Recruit scandal

TOKYO, April 25, (AP): Here is a chronology of developments in the Recruit bribery scandal, which forced Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita to announce his resignation today.

1986 - Recruit Co., a rapidly growing information and publishing conglomerate, sells large numbers of unlisted shares in one of its subsidiaries at low prices to about 160 influential politicians, businessmen and government officials.

Oct 30, 1986 — The shares are listed on the overthe-counter market, and quickly rise in value. Many recipients sell their shares, making large profits.

June 18, 1988 - First news of the scandal comes when a newspaper reports that the deputy mayor of a city outside Tokyo received low-priced Recruit shares in exchange for favours in a building project.

June and July, 1988 - News reports gradually disclose the names of other officials who received Recruit shares, including aides to Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita and former Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone.

Aug 1, 1988 - Questioning on the Recruit issue begins in parliament, delaying debate over a tax-reform package backed by the ruling Liberal Democratic Party. The package includes an unpopular 3 per cent sales tax.

Sept 2, 1988 — The Finance Ministry says the Recruit stock transactions violated securities laws because they were not reported to the ministry. Sept 5, 1988 — Opposition lawmaker Yonosuke

Narazaki says a Recruit official, Hiroshi Mat-subara, offered him 5 million yen ($38,000) to softpedal his investigation into the scandal. Sept 6, 1988 — A video tape showing the alleged bribery attempt, filmed by a TV network at Narazaki's request, is shown on national television. October, 1988 — The Communist and Socialist Parties disclose names of more politicians who received Recruit shares. Oct 20, 1988 - Prosecutors take Matsubara into custody — the first arrest in the Recruit case.

Nov 16, 1988 - A list of 156 purchasers of Recruit shares is released in parliament, with all the names except for those of 26 politicians and government officials deleted. reform package through parliament's lower house

March 7, 1989 - Former NTT chairman Shinto is arrested on suspicion of having provided favours to Recruit in exchange for stock.

March 8, 1989 — Prosecutors arrest Takashi Kato, former vice minister of labour. March 28, 1989 - Kunio Takaishi, former vice minister of education, is the 14th person arrested in the scandal. March 31, 1989 - In an explanation to parliament of his Recruit ties, Takeshita says he received more than 130 million yen ($1 million) in political donations from the company. April 12, 1989 — Takeshita acknowledges the Recruit donations exceeded the total amount allowable under law for a company of its size.

April 16, 1989 - A poll by Kyodo News Service shows Takeshita's support rating at only 3.9 per cent, an all-time low. April 22, 1989 - News reports disclose that half of last year's level in the first quarter of this year due mainly to sluggish exports, government officials said today. The current account measures trade in goods and services plus certain unilateral transfers.

Officials at the Bank of Korea, the Central Bank, said South Korea's current account recorded a surplus of $1.3 billion for the first three months of this year $517.9 million in January, $360.2 million in February and $422.5 million in March.

The January-March surplus is only 44.5 per cent of the $2.9 billion surplus in the same period last year. The bank officials attributed the shrinking surplus to an export slump coupled with spreading labour protests and the strong won, the South Korean currency. The overall economic figures are alarming, the official said. They especially expressed concern that exports, the mainstay of South Korea's economy, grew only 8.1 per cent in the first quar-

LONDON, APRIL 25, REUTER - SHARES OPENED FIRMER HERE IN QUIET BUSINESS WITH DEALERS STILL WARY OF OPENING LARGE NEW POSITIONS AHEAD OF TOMORROW'S CRUCIAL MARCH U.K. TRADE DATA. DEALERS SAID THIS FIGURE COULD WELL DETERMINE THE IMMEDIATE

DIRECTION FOR U.K. INTEREST RATES. A HIKE IN U.K. RATES IS STRONGLY EXPECTED SHOULD A BAD FIGURE HURT STERLING TO AN EXTENT THAT INTERVENTION IN THE CURRENCY MARKETS CANNOT SUPPORT IT. CONSOLIDATED GOLD FIELDS WAS 30P WEAKER AT 1,253 AFTER NEWS THAT A NEW YORK DISTRICT JUDGE REFUSED TO MODIFY AN EARLIER U.S. COURT ORDER PREVENTING MINORCO'S BID.

AT 0805 GMT THE FTSE INDEX WAS 2.5 POINTS HIGHER AT 2,064.5. THE DEADLINE FOR MINORCO'S BID FOR CONS GOLD IS TOMORROW. HOMEVER, THE COMPANY CAN FILE AN EMERGENCY APPEAL WITH THE U.S. SECOND CIRCUIT COURT OF APPEALS IN NEW YORK.

SHOULD HINORCO GAIN 50 PCT OF CONS GOLD BY TOMORROW'S DEADLINE, IT WILL HAVE UNTIL MAY 17 TO CLEAR UP ITS DIFFICULTIES IN THE U.S. COURTS. IF THE BID LAPSES, BRITISH LAW STIPULATES THAT MINORCO IS RESTRICTED FROM MAKING ANOTHER FULL BID FOR CONS GOLD FOR ANOTHER YEAR.

DEALERS SAID SHARES IN METALS GROUP JOHNSON MATTHEY WERE 5-1/2P STRONGER AT 398P ON SPECULATION THAT MINORCO MAY BE INTERESTED IN THE COMPANY IF THE CONS GOLD BID FAILS.

London Gold

LONDON, APRIL 24, REUTER - GOLD BULLION TRADING ENDED THE DAY SLIGHTLY HIGHER, RESPONDING TO AN EARLIER DOLLAR DOLMTURN. GOLD CLOSED AT 384.50/385.00 DLRS AN OUNCE, UP FROM ITS OPENING 383.70/384.20, BUT LITTLE CHANGED FROM FRIDAY'S CLOSE OF 384.25/384.75 DLRS.
DEALERS SAID GOLD TRADING WAS FEUTURELESS THROUGHOUT THE DAY

WITH ROUTINE DOLLAR FLUCTUATIONS THE SOLE INCENTIVE. UNCERTAINTY OVER THE OUTLOOK FOR INTEREST RATES ALSO INHIBITED ACTIVITY. PLATINUM CLOSED AT 546.00/547.50 DLRS AN OUNCE, UP FROM ITS AFTERNOON FIX OF 544.00 AND COMPARED TO FRIDAY'S 549.50/551.00 CLOSE.

London Money Market

LONDON, APRIL 25, REUTER - MONEY MARKET INTEREST RATES WERE LITTLE CHANGED IN QUIET EARLY TRADING AS FEARS OF ANY IMMEDIATE RISE IN U.K. LENDING RATES ABATED FOLLOWING SIGNALS LAST WEEK BY THE BANK OF ENGLAND THAT IT DID NOT WISH TO SEE HIGHER RATES.
THE CENTRAL BANK'S INTERVENTION TO DEFEND STERLING ON FRIDAY WHEN THE CURRENCY APPEARED REASONABLY STABLE AND THE FAILURE BY THE BANK TO OFFER A WEEKLY T-BILL TENDER WERE TAKEN AS SIGNS THAT THE BANK WAS SATISFIED WITH BASE RATES AT 13 PCT.

HOWEVER, MONEY MARKET RATES ARE EXPECTED TO MAINTAIN CURRENT LEVELS AS MANY OPERATORS STILL REMAIN A LITTLE NERVOUS AHEAD OF WEDNESDAY'S U.K. TRADE FIGURES FOR MARCH, DEALERS SAID.

Wall Street Market Report

NEW YORK, April 25, (Reuter): Share prices on Wall Street retreated on profittaking following a strong advance last week that took blue chips to post-crash highs. But selling was mild and stocks closed with only modest losses. Investors are waiting for several economic reports later this week.

The Dow Jones industrial average slipped seven to 2,403 after rising 7? points last week. Declining issues outpaced gainers by about seven to six Trading was moderate.

"Today's action is particularly encouraging in view of the move we've had," said Gene Jay Seagle, Gruntal and Co. director of technical research.

Tokyo Stock Market Report

TOKYO STOCKS CLOSE SHARPLY HIGHER ON TAKESHITA TOKYO, APRIL 25, REUTER - SHARE PRICES CLOSED SHARPLY HIGHER. SOME POLITICAL UNCERTAINTY WAS DISPELLED AFTER PRIME MINISTER NOBORU TAKESHITA SAID TODAY THAT HE AND THE REST OF THE CABINET WOULD RESIGN OVER THE RECRUIT SHARE SCANDAL. MOST EXPECTED THE RESIGNATION, BUT WERE UNSURE OF THE TIMING.

BIT LOOKS LIKE THE WORST OF THE RECRUIT SCANDAL IS OVER FOR THE PRESENT, SAID A BROKER AT A FOREIGN HOUSE.

NEWS OF THE RESIGNATION PUSHED THE YEN AND YEN BOND PRICES

HIGHER. THAT ALSO BOOSTED SENTIMENT IN THE STOCK MARKET. THE KEY 225-SHARE NIKKEI INDEX SURGED 438.86 POINTS, OR

1.34 PCT, TO FINISH AT 33,244.78.

THIS IS THE BIGGEST ONE-DAY GAIN SINCE A 793.96-POINT RISE ON MARCH 28. THE NIKKEI FELL 223.89 POINTS ON MONDAY.

BUT TURNOVER, ON THE LAST DAY OF TRADE FOR APRIL DELIVERY, WAS A LIGHT 800 MLN SHARES AGAINST A SCANT 450 MLN ON HONDAY. "THERE IS RELIEF THAT AT LEAST PART OF THE RECRUIT SCANDAL

SEEMS TO BE CLEARED UP BECAUSE TAKESHITA IS FINALLY TAKING RESPONSIBILITY, AND THEREFORE IT IS EXPECTED THAT THE BUDGET WILL PASS RELATIVELY SMOOTHLY," SAID CHRIS TAYLOR, HEAD OF SALES AT BARING SECURITIES LTD. TAKESHITA SAID HE WILL RESIGN AFTER PASSAGE OF THE 1989/90

BUDGET BILL. THE FISCAL YEAR HERE STARTS ON APRIL 1. WITH TAKESHITA HAVING ANNOUNCED HIS RESIGNATION, POLITICAL ANALYSTS SAID THEY EXPECT THE BLOGET TO PASS PARLIAMENT'S LOWER HOUSE IN 10 DAYS OR SO, AND POSSIBLY AS EARLY AS THIS WEEK, IT THEN GOES TO THE UPPER HOUSE, WHICH MUST PASS IT IN 30 DAYS, GIVING TAKESHITA ABOUT ANOTHER MONTH IN OFFICE.

THE NIKKEI SOARED 512.11 POINTS TO THE DAY'S HIGH OF 33,318.03 IN EARLY AFTERNON TRADE, MAINLY ON PURCHASES BY INVESTMENT TRUSTS. A LARGE NUMBER OF NEW TRUSTS ARE SCHEDULED TO BE SET UP THIS WEEK, ABOUT HALF OF WHICH ARE INDEX-LINKED.

"PEOPLE ARE RELIEVED," SAID TAKAHIDE FURUHASI, AN ANALYST AT DB CAPITAL MARKETS (ASIA) LTD.

Hong Kong Market Report

HONG KONG, APRIL 25, REUTER - ENCOURAGED BY SHARP GAINS OF THEIR COUNTERPARTS IN TOKYO, PRICES OF BLUE CHIPS CLOSED AT THE DAY'S HIGHS AFTER AN AFTERNOON REBOUND.

THE DAY'S HIGHS AFTER AN AFTERNOON REBOUND.

THE HANG SENG INDEX GAINED MORE THAN 30 POINTS IN THE

AFTERNOON AND CLOSED AT 3,118.73, 22.74 HIGHER THAN MONDAY'S

FINISH. THE HONG KONG INDEX ROSE 15.12 TO 2,061.78.

FINISH. THE HONG KONG INDEX ROSE 15.12 TO 2,061.78.

A TOTAL OF 866.14 MLN N.K. DLR WORTH OF SHARES CHANGED

HANDS COMPARED WITH MONDAY'S 848.93 MLN.

HANDS COMPARED WITH MONDAY'S 848.93 MLN.

DS COMPARED WITH HONDALLS SEEKING DIRECTION HORE FROM TOKYO THAN FROM NEW YORK, A U.K. HOUSE ANALYST SAID. "THE MARKET NOVEMENT OF THE LAST THE DAYS WAS THE LATEST PROOF.

After bank intervention

KD deposits ease in quiet trade

KUWAIT, April 25, (Reuter): Kuwaiti dinar deposit rates eased in quiet trade today after the Central Bank began purchasing 91-day treasury bills, pouring new funds into the market. Dealers said one to three month rates eased 1/16 point, from yesterday to 8-7/8 5/8 per cent, while six months eased to 8-7/8 1/2 from a similar level. However, nearly all business was in the shorter dates, especially in spot-next, which eased to 8-1/2 eight after trading at 9-1/2 earlier in the day.

Overnight fell 1/2 point to 7-1/2 6-1/2 and tomorrow-next was steady at 8-1/27-1/2.

The Central Bank adjusted its dinar to dollar exchange rate to 0.28911/21 from 0.28878/88 yes-

Meanwhile, short-dated Saudi riyal interbank deposits firmed today as operators squared positions ahead of the Muslim Eid Al Fitr holiday but fixed periods were steady in thin trade.

Dealers said quotes for spotnext funds rose to 10-3/4, 1/2 per cent from 10, 9-3/8 yesterday, in part reflecting technical adjustment. The so-called Eid Run, maturing on May 3, traded at 9-7/8 per cent. The three-day holiday marking the end of the fasting month of Ramadan is expected to begin in the kingdom on May 6 after the Friday week-

One-month deposits also edged 1/16 point higher to 10, 9-7/8 per cent, with deals reported at 9-15/16.

The rest of the long-term maturities were quiet, with the three-month indicated at 10-1/8. 9-15/16 per cent and six-month at 10-1/4, 10. One-year was also steady at 10-7/16, 5/16 per cent. The spot rival was little changed at 3.7501/05 to the dollar.

irony is that Dominick, who seems to like and trust almost everyone — often to his detriment, is paying for Eugene to go through medical school via menial job as a rubbish collector in their home city of Pittsburgh.

When Eugene learns that he has been offered residency at Stanford and then begins to develop a relationship with a fellow intern, Jennifer (Jamie Lee Curtis), the strain of brotherhood stretches almost to breaking point.

OUTLOOK

ONE of the things I love about this part of the world is that it is still very much a cash society. There's little chance of falling into debt, because not only do you get what you pay for, but you have to pay - immediately - for what you get. Plastic money (credit cards) will no doubt eventually penetrate the market with gusto, but so far it hasn't made a great deal of headway.

By Kathy Cuddihy

Cheques have gained even less currency (if you'll pardon the pun). To anyone who has ever tried unsuccessfully to maintain a balanced chequebook, this is welcome news indeed. For a few months of the year, at least, I don't have to suffer the embarrassment of not even coming close to tallying my cheque stubs with the bank statement — or of coming maddeningly close, and not being able to reconcile

As much as I like to avoid writing cheques, I do love to receive them. The only thing that spoils this rare delight is the odious task of trying to cash the ruddy things. The irony is that this cash society often looks upon cheques - and the recipients of cheques with grave suspicion.

those last few pennies.

There are few exercises which bring me closer to tearing my hair out than the frustration of banking in this country.

Cheque-mate

Anywhere else, I simply stand in an orderly line until it's my turn at the teller. It normally takes only a couple of minutes to conduct my uncomplicated business in an uncomplicated manner.

Here, it takes me several minutes just to determine which higgledly-piggledy line I should join. Despite guidance from bank staff, I inevitably end up in the wrong one for some reason or another.

When I finally do reach the right person, further confusion ensues because the name on my iqama seldom corresponds to the name on the cheque. I patiently try to explain that both names legally belong to me, but that some bureaucrat merely forgot to write my full name on this particular document. This argument usually doesn't have a lot of impact.
"Look," I plead, "what is your name? 'Abdul Aziz," comes a hesitant reply. "Abdul Aziz. That's a good name, but did your parents give you another name when you were born?" I silently prayed that they had.

"Abdullah." the clerk confessed, still not sure where the logic was leading.

"Wonderful. Abdul Aziz Abdullah. It's exactly the same with me. I, too, have two names, except people call me by my second name rather than my first. And to complicate matters even more, everyone abreviates my second name. Rather like they shorten your name to Aziz." I hoped this last bit of reasoning would have the necessary effect.

It definitely gave Abdul Aziz pause for thought, but it didn't fully convince him. "Look at the photo on my iqama," I persuaded him. "Doesn't it vaguely resemble me? Would anyone other than the owner of such a face dare to present it as their own?" With reluctance, he relented. But not before convincing me that the whole procedure would be much easier in future if I had an account at the bank.

"Do I really need an account? After all, a writer's paycheque is small change by any measure. There hardly seems much point in depositing an amount that would probably get lost in the

"Oh, you don't have to deposit anything," Abdul

Aziz assured me. "It just simplifies things if you have an account."

I'm not quite sure how it simplified things, or for whom. I still had to stand in lines and go on to several people for signatures on the collection of papers I gathered at every turn. And that was at the bank that "knew" me. If I received cheques issued on any other banks I was again treated with serious suspicion before being permitted to proceed through the bureaucratic maze.

In order to save time, relatively speaking, I occasionally let several months of cheques accumulate and then I would cash them all at once. My driver and I amused ourselves by placing hypothetical bets on how long the routine would take. After almost three years of this, we had refined the estimates to within minutes of accuracy. Until recently.

"Thirty-two minutes," I wagered, as we arrived at the bank.

"Thirty-four," countered my driver. We were both wrong.

The whole operation took just under eleven minutes. 'What happened?" I asked my old ally Abdul Aziz in astonishment. "It's easy now," he replied with a smile. "You have an account here."

What your score means

The letter you circled most stands for your money style. Within each style there are different personality types.
THE SPENDER

You use money as a way to gain freedom and create action. You may choose to take risks where others are cautious, in which case you're a gambler; for you, the hope of winning and the thrill of getting something for nothing makes the risk worthwhile. You're aggressive with your money, and you want to see it grow - you want to play with it. You may, on the other hand, be an overspender. At one time or another, all of us have spent more than we can afford, and most people must incur debt just to support a family so this money style may simply mean that you are working toward a more solid future. But it can become disabling if it is ongoing.

K: THE SKEPTIC

You are concerned most with security. You could be a pessimist: when you get a raise, you wonder if the company can afford to pay it; if you win a little money in the lottery, you fear you've used up your supply of good luck when you should have saved it for later. But maybe you're just a worrier — as many people are when it comes to money. You can't help dwelling on those nagging thoughts: Will the check clear on time! Did I pay too much for that dress? What if the automatic teller machine doesn't record my deposit? If you have total control over your money - if you stockpile against fate and reveal nothing about your finances to others - you're a miser. That doesn't mean you're always tightfisted; you may be generous with others and stingy only when it comes to spending on yourself.

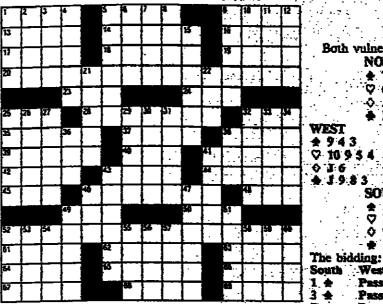

E: THE ENTHUSIAST

For you, money means power and self-esteem. If you're an optmist, you believe that things will work out for the best. Because of your ability to take setback in stride, you are likely to actually be successful. You think of money the way you do the water supply: You know it could dry up, but you assume it will be there when you need it. You might be a jock (who can be male or female). If so, making lots of money is your main goal; you want to put points on the board. You may have a "coach" — a boss, parent, spouse, or the memory of a certain person — to egg you on and give you support. Or you could be a hustler — not a cheat, but someone who's always on the alert for a deal. Making money excites you. Your style is direct and unapologetic.
U: THE UNDERINVOLVED

Considering your fianances makes you feel anxious and trapped. There's the bill that comes in at just the wrong time, or the insurance premium that suddenly skyrockets, or the unexpected illness or rise in tuition -even a parking ticket can send you into a state of panic. You're a victim of money, which you see as the unbeatable foe. The dod-ger also feels overwhelmed by financial burdens - but rather than admitting to panic, simply avoids thinking about problems. You're in this group if you hear yourself saying things like "I just can't deal with this" or "My accountants handles all that" or "I'm no good at math." Every now and then, this style leads to a small crisis — a bank balance way out of whack, lost investments, forgotten obligations. It's likely that you have the intelligence to stare down your money demons, but the idea of doing so makes you feel ill.

Women's rights: an uphill battle

By Leon Daniel

WASHINGTON, (UPI): Much more than an abortion-rights march, what happened last week in Washington was a massive protest against the global war on

The march on the capitol was a tactic in the battle to keep abortion legal, but it also meshed with overall strategy in the larger struggle for women's rights.

Many of the marchers know that violence against women is a world-wide tragedy of horrifying dimensions, particularly in the Third World.

Some of them, just before marching, read more about it in the Washington Post in an article by Lori Heise, a senior researcher at the Worldwatch Institute.

"Violence against women — including, assault, mutilation, murder, infanticide, rape and cruel neglect — is perhaps the most pervasive yet least recognized human-rights issue in the world," Heise wrote.

Why does it matter that President Bush is opposed to abortion? He'll never need one. Poor planning of domestic chores leads to tiredness

Why women suffer exhaustion

By Claire Rayner

THE normal state of the average wife and mother, it sometimes seems, is exhaustion. With so many mothers holding down paid jobs as well as caring for a family, perhaps that seems reasonable. Or is it? It could be argued that modern houses, equipment design and the convenience foods now available should have released women from the tyranny of housework.

But, however convincing the arguments, there can be little doubt that many women do complain of constant tiredness. Why do they get so weary, and what can be done to avoid it?

Obviously, if a woman is suffering from anaemia, hormonal disorders, arthritis, or depression, she'll get exhausted easily. The problem then is her health and she needs medical treatment. Once that's organised, she'll probably be able to cope without getting worn out.

But there are other causes that are not so easy to deal with. Far too often women will say "I've got too much to do" or "the day just isn't long enough" or whatever, but in fact in most cases the exhaustion is due not to too much of some things, but too little of

Lack of esteem

Very few women regard domestic work as important. Necessary, yes, but impor-tant? Never. Because they aren't paid directly for it they regard cleaning and cooking as something that is not to be treated significantly.

The only work they consider valuable is that with a tangible cash reward. And because the woman with domestic respon-sibilities is often limited in her choice of paid jobs she will regard that as unimpor-tant too. "I've got a little job," she will say, meaning it's part-time and it pays less than her husband's does, that it takes just as much effort seems not to be noticed. This lack of self-esteem makes her feel guilty when she's tired after putting in 36 hours at an outside job, and then another 60 or 70 at home. And guilt makes you tired.

Lack of planning
As a direct outcome of not regarding domestic work as important, it's rare for a woman to bring to it the sort of man-agement skills that are needed to plan any other sort of job. If housework were done in factories, ways would be found to group tasks so that they'd be done with the greatest economy of effort, to assess which could be done away with, to decide how to equip the workplace; to work out how to trim jobs of unnecessary labour, and so on. If such thought is applied to housework, it's amazing how it reduces the strain. Lack of rewards

Because women themselves take their efforts at home and for the family for granted, so do the family. Clothes are taken off dirty and reappear in drawers and cupboards clean and ironed. To the family it's like the sunrise: an inevitable event that needs no comment. To the woman who has done the work, it's like a slap in the face. And it's very wearing indeed to be slapped over and over again.

Lack of support
Far too few spouses and children take their share of domestic work, even when a woman has an outside job as well. And women often allow them to get away with doing nothing at home on the grounds that they themselves take it as normal that it's a mother's responsibility to take care of the home (it isn't; it's the responsibility of everyone who lives in it, of course); and that it's "less trouble" to do it themselves that to teach their spouse of children how

Lack of stimulus

As a result of the lack of planning and esteem for housework, many women find it desperately boring. Let's face it, shoving dirt from one place to another is no occupation for an intelligent person. If a woman spends too much time over housework, or a boring "little job" she'll sink into boredom. And there's nothing more

Lack of exercise

It's a paradoxical fact that the more women have to do, the less exercise they get. We sit at desks, sit at workbenches, sit to feed children and so on. We may be aware of intense pressure to get things done, but the calories we expend are few. And lack of exercise makes you sluggish. A half-hour workout, or a swim or a job, can perk up your energy levels and improve your production of endorphins, those inner stimulants which make you feels so

Lack of self-care

build in time for the woman to use for her own needs, because of lack of self-esteem and lack of exercise, many women do not look after their health. They eat odds and ends, sleep badly, wake weary and therefore eat even less, rest even less and exercise even less. They get into a down-wards spiral that can result in illness. And ill people are tired people.

Because of poor planning which fails to

■ Never think you're the only one able to do a job. Five-year-olds make excellent washer-uppers once they're taught. Men can sew, change nappies, clean the loo and make the supper — as long as you take it for granted they can and will. To exclude them from such tasks as "too slow" is to make a classic rod for your own back.

■ It doesn't always have to be done your way. You can wear yourself out trying to make sure the family washes up in your style, or cooks your way, but why? Go and put your feet up and let them get on with it. The less you watch them, the less tired you'll get. And it will still get done.

Expect them to share. Don't say "They're very good" because they wash up once in a blue moon. Hollywood life minus the glitz

By Ivor Davis

MALIBU, Calif: The day Jill Ireland went to the hospital to pick up the new baby she and her then-husband David McCallum were adopting McCallum was out of town, so her lover Charles Bronson came instead. It is revelations such as this that make Ireland's new book Life Lines (Warner Books) shocking.

While Ireland's first best seller Life Wish (1987; Little, Brown) chronicled the actress' battle with breast cancer, its sequel is a harsher, more honest baring of ber family life and marriage. The reality behind the movie-star facade is not always pretty.

The baby, named Jason, picked up at 2-days-old in a black Cadillac, grew up to become a heroin addict. Ireland tells the story of her futile attempts to help him while supervising four elaborate homes and traveling the world with her new husband — movie star Bronson — seven children from their previous marriages, nannies and pets.

Then she got cancer, not a small lump but a large, advanced tumor that by the time it was discovered had metastasized into eight lymph nodes. She underwent a radical mastectomy, chemotherapy and radiation. She was barely over that when her father suffered a series of strokes and was left unable to communicate.

Many women would have pen and started writing again. Life Lines tells the whole incredible story - unvarnished, unsanitized, real. No sooner had she finished it than she was hit with the coup de grace — her cancer had recurred. The whole cycle was starting again.

I found out my son was a heroin addict two weeks after I finished my chemotherapy," says Ireland. "I was under a tremendous amount of stress. My marriage was under a lot of strain. I was just getting over cancer and chemotherapy, now we were dealing with an addict, the demands and needs of a bunch of other children, several households. I had to learn I couldn't be general manager of the world.'

For a well-brought-up English girl it was difficult to learn to concentrate on No. 1. "I had to teach the children to do things for themselves, otherwise it was taking precious strength from me. I finally realized there was nothing wrong with being selfish. I don't go crazy anymore. Now I realize I'm in more trouble than they are and I can't do anything for them if I die," she says. In addition to working hard on her first book, Ireland also travelled the lecture circuit as chairwoman of the American Cancer Society. "I was getting more and more tired," she says. "I had no energy. I should have known. That's always the first sign it's coming back." Still, it came as a shock when her cancer recurred last July. Ireland, 52, who could easily pass for 35, has a soft voice. Her deceptively fragile looks have often fooled people into taking her lightly, as a sort of pretty adjunct to the strong, macho Bronson. Not anymore. "Sometimes people have mis-taken my quietness for weakness." she says. "But I don't think I was ever this quiet little English person. I may have become more traditional when I married Charlie (in 1968) because the qualities he appreciated were those of quiet feminity, but that wasn't really

When she discovered the new cancer she was both angry and bitter. "I knew the original tumor was large, but I was unso-phisticated about it. Before it tur-ned up again I didn't think it was really me they were talking about I was able to distance myself from the Jill Ireland who had written a best seller," she says. The cancer and her son's addiction blew away any remaining traces of reticence. "Drug addiction is the national disease," she says. "Addicts talk about only two things — how to get off drugs and how to get their next fix. When you have someone in the family who is an addict, along with the pain you feel shame.

Helping her cope with the was former hirst lady belly Ford. "I love that woman," says Ireland. "She helped me so much. She made me realize you can't waste time feeling shame."

Bronson hasn't read her first book and when he heard she was writing a second one he was angry, accusing her of selfishness in wanting to vent her feelings without worrying about the effect on the rest of the family.

"Charlie is a private man," says Ireland. "He was probably going through the same feelings of embarrassment and shame for his son. Hopefully, now he realizes the more you open up, the quicker things get better."

She says Bronson's attitude has changed somewhat. He understands her need to express herself, but he still refuses to read her books. "I tell him to go out and play golf or something. How could I expect any man to cope with this? Today, however, he is rounding up my medical records. He is very supportive," she says.

Jason, 27, a would-be actor who is still recovering from the addiction that almost killed him, did read his mother's book. "He read it twice and cried and said, "I'm proud of you, Mom. If it can help one kid, and it might, it'll be worth it." she says. Ireland is currently promoting her book in America and Britain, but wants to conserve her energy. She is planning to produce a new movie, begin another book and contemplates acting.

QUESTION: While visiting my son in Minnesota, he invited me to take a brisk walk before supper. The evening was cold, with snow on the ground, but there was good footing along the road. We hadn't made a half mile before I experienced a tightness in my chest, a dry cough and wheezing. I could barely breathe. A rapid trip to an emergency room convinced everyone that my problem wasn't a heart attack. others. They feel tired most of the time, even when they have had adequate rest.

They are usually irritable, become upset rapidly and tend to be bothered by little items and insignificant incidents. They're not much to be around since they have no enthusiasm for new projects and no feelings of enjoyment even for pastimes they once relished. Headaches are frequent symptoms, as are complaints about indigestion and constipation. Loss of interest in food may lead to weight loss. Women: the power behind the throne

By Mark R. Horowitz

THE public is aware of strong-willed first ladies who have influenced their presidential husbands in the decision-making process. In recent years, Nancy Reagan has been both praised and criticized for her involvement in policymaking, and in another era Eleanor Roosevelt often ruled the roost during FDR's heyday in office. The same is no doubt true in the business world, although the wives of corporate leaders are less conspicuous. Claire Luce Booth no doubted played a major role in the machinations of her publisher husband,

And although Bonnie Swearingen plays the socialite role, one wonders how much influence she had over her husband John during his years at the helm of the former Standard Oil of Indiana, now known as

More than 800 years ago, a strong-willed woman helped her husband not only implement his business at hand - becoming king - but helped carve out a new country: Portugal.

In 1095, King Alfonso VI of Castile and Leon gave his daughter. Theresa, in marriage to a famous crusader, Henry of Burgundy. As part of the package, Henry received a parcel of land from the domain of Leon called Portugal, after the Roman scaport of Portus Cale. Henry, however, wanted to be a king, not a count beholden to his father-in-law. So he and his wife schemed to make their lands a separate, independent kingdom.

Unfortunately, Theresa's husband died in 1112, but that didn't stop her from continuing their quest. Through her efforts, the upper classes became indoctrinated with the notion of an independent Portugal, and she helped fortify Portuguese cities for war.

Theresa led her armies into battle — when she wasn't busy receiving visits from posts, musicians and lovers.

The going was not easy. At various times she was defeated, captured, deposed and reinstated. When she finally died in 1130, it was in exile

But Theresa had been a good teacher to her son. Affonso I Henriques (1128-1185), who now took it upon himself to achieve what his mother set out to do. When the king of Castile promised Affonso any land he could capture from the occuping armies of the Moors, the son of Theresa plunged headlong into battle to carve out a large country he could call In 1139 at Ourique, Affonso defeated the Moors, thus creating the possibility of establishing a large kingdom under his rule. The king of Castile was hardly thrilled at the news — even though he had promised Affonso any land he could wrest from the Moors. The matter of who owned the land went before the Pope, who favoured the claim of Castile. But Affonso, as was his mother, was not one to give up. He offered to hold the lands of Portugal as a domain under the auspices of the papacy, and even agreed to pay an annual tribute to the Pope. It was an offer too good to turn down. In 1143, the Pope recognized Affonso as king of Portugal, this fulfilling the dream of his father and

It cannot be proven that behind every successful man there is a woman pushing him on, especially today when women are doing just fine on their own. But it sure doesn't hurt the male of the species to have the support and courage of his mate.

Such support is the stuff kingdoms are carved from, by the children if not by mother herself.

Press chief Pedro Palacios told reporters yesterday that Barcelona itself would be reserved for the estimated 138,000 participants in the Games, as well as media, security and technical

About 750,000 beds within an hour's drive of the city would be available for spectators, he said. He was speaking after the organisers presented a threehour report on Games preparations to the executive board of the International Olympic Committee (IOC). It was described by one IOC official as "honest, frank and direct."

Palacios said Barcelona had about 20,000 hotel beds at the moment and plans were in hand. to build at least five new hotels and possibly 12 more. City officials are known to fear the new hotels may leave Barcelona with more rooms than it needs after the Games.

Athletes and journalists will be housed in special villages. As well as hotels, games staff and officials will stay in colleges, private houses and luxury ships anchored in the harbour of the Meditterranean port.

Mayor Pasqual Maragall told a news conference the IOC's insistence on inviting a large num-ber of guests, including nearly 10,000 from sponsor companies, had contributed to the strain on the city's accommodation.

Barcelona's international airport will be improved for the Games and two ring roads built around the city. There are also plans to flatten the steep 1.8 km (1.1 mile) final stretch of the proposed marathon approaching the Montjuich stadium.

Maragall said the IOC

executive board had not questioned the organisers about security arrangements.

The Spanish government is known to be concerned that the Basque separatist group ETA (Basque Homeland and Freedom) might try to disrupt the Games, although Maragall had declined:

Deer takes Brewers past tough Twins

NEW YORK, April 25, (AP): Rob Deer hit a two-run homer with two outs in the ninth inning off Jeff Reardon to give the Milwaukee Brewers a 5-4 victory over the Minnesota Twins last

The Twins had taken a 4-3 lead in the top of the ninth when Dan Gladden homered and Kent Hrbek hit a sacrifice fly off reliever Dan Plesac. With one out in the bottom of the pinth, Gary Sheffield singled and moved to second on Robin Yount's grounder to short. Deer, who had struck out three times in four previous at-bats fouled off four pitches before hit-ting his fifth home run of the

Rickey Henderson drove in two runs with a bases-loaded single during a four-run fourth inning as New York beat Cleveland 6-3.

Dave Lapoint, 2-1, got the victory, the Yankees' seventh in 10 games since they ended a sevengame losing streak. They split the four-game series in Cleveland after losing three straight to the Indians in New York the first weekend of the season. Doyle Alexander pitched a seven-hitter for his 18th career shutout and Torey Lovullo hit a sacrifice fly as Detroit edged Seattle 1-0. Alexander, 3-0, walked five and struck out none.

Mark Langston, 2-3, gave up five hits, walked three and struck out four in seven innings.

Tony Phillips doubled home the tying and winning runs with one out in the ninth inning to give Oakland a 5-4 victory over Toronto extending the Athletics winning streak to six games.

Jim Abbott, who had struggled in his two previous starts, won his first Major-I eague game with six strong innings as the California Angels beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-2.

Abbott, the 1988 Olympic hero for the gold medal-winning US team, allowed the two runs on four hits and three walks. He struck out one and had one wild

Jansher and Dittmar sail into semifinals

PARIS, April 25, (Reuter): Top seeds Jansher Khan and Chris Dittmar sailed through to the semifinals of the Paris Men's Open yesierday, sweeping aside their opponents with a minimum of effort. Number one seed Jansher dispatched New Zealander Rory Watt, the tournament's last surviving qualifier, 9-0 9-4

The world number two controlled almost every rally, moving easily around the court and waiting for his opponent to make mistakes. Number two seed Dittmar of Australia had a similarly comfortable victory, but over an opponent who should have been harder to beat - compatriot and world number six Chris Robertson.

A combination of accuracy and low driving shots, many of them dying before hitting the back wall, were 100 much for an out-of-form Robertson.

The result of that match must have come as a relief to Jansher, however. It was Robertson who knocked him out of the British Open two weeks ago.

To the disappointment of the crowd at the tiny Paris venue, where a capacity crowd means around 40 people including the umpire, both Jansher and Dittmar have yet to be really tested in the tour-

In the other quarterfinals, young Pakistani Mir Zaman Gui made a superb comeback against compatriot Zarak Jahan Khan and England's Del Harris beat Australia's Rodney Martin. After losing the first game 9-0 and the chance of survival.

But he found his form in the third game as his drop shots began to hit their mark, unnerving his opponent — along with a series of disputed decisions. Gul finally won the match 0-9 6-9 9-7 9-5 9-4. Seventh-seed Harris also faced an outof-form opponent. He beat fifth-seed Martin 9-69-29-0.

The 20-year-old converted a 6-2 overnight lead into a comfortable

13-4 victory, winning the final frame 79-1 with a break of 48. But Hendry was far from satisfied with his performance. "No disrespect to Willie, but I didn't feel that I played as well as I did in my first round match," he said. Hendry survived a first round scare when he won only 10-9 against little-known Gary Wilkinson. "It's nice to win as easily as that (against Thorne) without playing well. The standard of snooker wasn't very good. Our misses put each other off."

Hendry lined up a quarterfinal appearance against 41-year-old Welshman Terry Griffiths who completed an arduous 13-9 win over Silvino Francisco of South Africa.

In other results, England's Tony Meo beat Eddie Charlton of Australia 13-8 and another Englishman Dean Reynolds beat Wayne Jones of Wales 13-3.

LANKA COLTS thrashed Hubara by five wickets to win the Trico Trophy cricket tournament and also end the 1988/89 season on a winning note at Ahmadi carlier this week.

Hubara, who were put in to bat, found the going tough against some very accurate Lanka Colts bowling and were restricted to 152 for nine wickets in the 30 allotted overs. Jimmy James was in excellent form and hit 42 runs for Hubara. He hammered a six and six fours in his innings and got some valuable support from Talbot, who batted patiently for 28 runs. For Colts, the bowling honours were shared by Oliver and

Ralph, who took two wickets each while Nalaka, Lal and Adi got one each. Colts started their innings on a disastrous note with Ossen caught behind by Shipton off the first ball of the innings.

Roville then joined the enterprising Nalaka, and they took the Colts total to 51, when Roville was caught behind off James for 14. Nalaka was next out, bowled by Flower for 39 --which included 5 fours and a six

W.Germans to face Dutch

Beckenbauer recalls Augenthaler

Augenthaler holds the key to W.German chances

ROTTERDAM, April 25, (Reuter): Libero Klaus Augenthaler, whose international career looked over in 1986, will be a key figure when he makes his comeback for West Germany in the World Cup match against the Netherlands here tomorrow.

The Germans, losing finalists at the last two World Cups, and the gifted Dutch, who conquered Europe last year, may both qualify for the 1990 finals from European Group Four. But the second team in the four-nation section is not completely sure of going, which makes this such an important contest. Augenthaler, 31, was forced out of the 1986 World Cup in Mexico with an injury after just two matches end has struggled to get back in Franz Beckenbauer's team since then. He last appeared as a substitute against Spain in October 1986.

But the stocky libero has been in the best form of his life in Bayern Munich's League and UEFA Cup campaigns this season and Beckenbauer sees his authoritative presence as a vital factor against the Dutch - and beyond.

"Augenthaler has returned to form because he believes he is the boss. Otherplayers need him and look for him." Beckenbauer said. "He has this role in my team now and will play libero all the way to

At least Augenthaler's defence will not have to worry about former European Player of the Year Rund Gullit, who was injured in AC Milan's European Cup semifinal win over Real Madrid last week. He is expected to be replaced by Ajax Amsterdam's Aron Winter. The Dutch are also missing goalkeeper Hans van Breukelen, midfielder Jan Wouters and strikers Wim Kieft and John Bosman.

Even so, the finishing prowess of Marco van Basten and the playmaking of Ronald Koeman and Frank Rijkaard provide the Netberlands with talent not available to other teams.

"Qualification for Italy doesn't just depend on this match. But whoever wins will be a long way there," Dutch coach Thijs Librogts said.

The Dutch ended West Germany's hopes of winning the European championship on home soil last June when they beat them 2-1 in a semifinal in Hamburg. That set off street parties all over the Netherlands to celebrate final revenge for defeat in the 1974 World Cup final.

In qualifying action for the 1990 World Cup, the teams drew 0-0 in Munich last October and both have three points although the Germans lead the group on goal difference. Wales and Fin-land, who make up the section, can hold out little hope of challenging either of their mighty

Lineker seeks to end scoring drought

England weakened by withdrawal of Barnes

LONDON April 25. (Reiner). Gary Lineker will seek to end his own scoring drought and help repair the damaged morale of English societ when he leads the attack against. Albania in a World Cap disalifier at Wembley tomorrow.

Lineker, who has not scored for England since last May when he hit the winner against Switzerland in a riendly has shown signs of improved form with his Spanish the Barcelona in recent weeks, but useds no prose he weeks that useds to prove he remains an international marksman of the highest quality.

If he can end his run of seven games without a goal. Lineker will not only lift England clear of win not only use england clear of Sweden at the top of European qualitying Group Two, but also revive English spirits after the tragedy at the Liverpool-Nottingham Forest FA Cup semifinal at Hillsborough which claimed 95 lives 10 days ago. . . .

England manager Bobby Robson captured the mood of his team when he said: "We have all had to steel ourselves for the task, to get our minds right at a time of grief and mourning.

The game took such a knock at Hillsborough that a good

English performance and win is needed to give a boost for the whole country. I will tell the players nothing less will do." Robson's squad has been weakened by the withdrawal of Liverpool's John Barnes, who has committed himself to attend funerals this week, but his team is still likely to be too strong for

Albania's well-organised but limited side. Barnes' place in on the left wing is likely to be taken by Chris Waddle with another Liverpool player, Peter Beardsley, recalled to partner Lineker in a team otherwise unchanged from the one which beat Albania 2-0 in Tirana

Waddle believes Wembley's spacious patch will be perfect for Lineker to add to his total of 28 goals for England. He said:
"Their defence isn't the most solid I've played against and if Gary plays I'd bet on him scoring a couple of goals."

Albania coach Shyqyri Rreli

McNeil fights back to outplay Hakami

HOUSTON, April 25, (UPI): Lori McNeil came from behind in her hometown last night to edge Elly Hakami 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in the opening round of the Virginia Slims of Houston.

Hakami, ranked 115th in the world, broke the fourth-seeded McNeil's serve twice in racing to a 5-1 lead in the first set. But McNeil, ranked 14th in the world, broke Hakami twice in the second set to tie the match. Hakami won the first two games of the final set, but McNeil eventually closed out the match by breaking Hakami's serve.

McNeil said she was not unnerved by her erratic performance.
"My main focus is the French Open and I'm just using this tournament as practice," she said. Hakami, a semifinalist at this tournament last year, was visibly upset by her failure to pull off the upset.

"I know I could've beaten her," Hakami said. "I had lots of chances. Not to take credit from her, but I can't say I'm satisfied.

In other first-round action yesterday, Katrina Adams beat 17-year-old Donna Faber 3-6, 7-6 (7-2), 6-3, Angeliki Kan-ellopoulou of Greece beat Kate Gompert 6-3, 6-2, and Monica Seles whipped Mary Lou Daniels of Chicago, 6-26-3.

Faber broke Adams three times to easily win the first set. Faber rebounded from a 3-0 deficit in the second set to take a 5-4 lead. But Adams held serve and then demolished Faber in the tiebreaker.

Jumped Adams jumped to a 3-0 lead in the final set and was never seriously challenged. "I was forcing a lot of shots in the first set," Adams said, "and I lost my concentration after I jumped out in the second. But I just stopped making errors." A crucial point came in the tiebreaker when Adams blindly stabbed a slice backhand for a crosscourt winner to go up 5-2.

"I hadn't made a passing shot all day," Adams said, "and that shot made me feel like I could attack and win."

Gompert, who was among the world's top 50 players for more than three years in the mid-1980s, is trying to come back after mononucleosis forced her out of action last year.

But in five events this year, Gompert has yet to advance past the first round.

"I'll have to go through some tough matches until I get it back." said Gompert. "The physical part is coming back. It's just the mental side that's eluding me."

'You take (the ranking) for granted, but when you don't have it, you realise how hard it is to get it back," Gompert said.
